

While the telecommunications industry seemed to have its struggles, XO Communications kept positive press flowing about meeting/exceeding numbers and having funding well into the future when I purchased my shares.

Selling the company out from under the owners (shareholders) is unethical and, in my mind, is stealing.

XO has a number of other options available that will not leave the current shareholders holding the entire bag. I suggest that the FCC encourage XO to pursue these options.

If XO is allowed to restructure in this manner, it sets open the door for other companies to do the same. Corporate America is not above the little guy - its investors. I respectfully ask that the FCC keep this point in mind when making its ruling.

Sincerely,

Arthur P. Villa
